1.3 DNS: The Domain Name System (DNS) is a set of software and computers that translates domain names into their matching IP addresses and visa versa.
 When you type www.csc.gov.in into your web-browser, your request gets resolved (or converted) into an IP address and the information found at that address gets delivered back to your browser.
 Domain Naming Service (DNS) establishes the correspondence between the domain name of your site (e.g : example.com) and the IP address where it is hosted (e.g : 103.204.194.182) on the Internet. A DNS server is a system which makes this correspondence. To be active on the Internet, a domain name must have at least one DNS, sometimes it is mandatory, to have two or more DNS servers to take advantage in failure cases.
 Domain Name Server:
